Terms and Conditions of Use

A user may connect to our service from a computer or local area network. We do not charge extra for data transmitted or time used on our unlimited access accounts. We do not charge extra for data transmitted on our timed accounts.

The metered accounts expire when total hours or total months purchased lapse, whichever comes first.

After a period of online access, determined by Uniting Communication, a user may be disconnected for a short period of time and then be allowed to reconnect. This is to ensure fair access for all of our customers.

A user account may be used on different machines but NOT at the same time. Users who show duplicate connections in our service logs will have both sessions disconnected and may be automatically barred from dialling in. Users who wish to access the Internet through multiple machines are encouraged to use a local area network. We can assist you in setting up a local area network to access the Internet.

At times, the service may be unavailable due to maintenance, upgrades, inclement weather or other unforeseen circumstances.

Uniting Communication reserves the right to change the Terms and Conditions of Use at any time.

Uniting Communication gives no warranties of any kind, whether expressed or implied, with respect to the Internet service provided and accepts no liability or responsibility for any loss, injury, damage, cost or expenses suffered or incurred by users, including (without limitation) loss of data, delays, nondeliveries, misdeliveries or service interruptions whether resulting from service faults, defects or the negligence, error or omission of any person or body. The use by any person of information obtained Uniting Communication is entirely at the person's own risk and Uniting Communication expressly denies and disclaims all responsibility for the accuracy, fitness for purpose or quality of information obtained through its internet services.
